Note to Parents:

Reading and research rely heavily on the ability of readers to ask questions. We want to encourage your children to learn more about what they are reading through the process of asking questions. Their curiosity will inspire them to read for answers and to discover more information about a topic they find interesting. As your child reads, he or she will probably come up with even more wonderings about the topic. It's good for your child to come up with these questions so he or she can stay active in the reading and learning process.

Assignment: I Like to Wonder!

With the help of a parent or a family member, choose a nonfiction book with a subject that looks interesting to you. For books, please visit wegivebooks.org.

In the box, write a list of things you already know about the subject of your book. Then write a list of things you still wonder about after reading about the subject.

What do you still want to learn?

Please write the title and author of the book below.

Title of book:

Author:

What I Know...	I Wonder...
